August 13, 2011 – Asheboro, N.C. – Hundreds of people turned out for Randolph Telephone Membership Corporation's 53rd Annual Meeting on August 13. Talented singer and Asheboro native Alyssa Lowe regaled the crowd with her rendition of the National Anthem before introducing the Southwestern Randolph High School JROTC Color Guard.

General Manager Frankie Cagle spoke about the most recent developments in the cooperative, including the construction of a 126-foot tower to offer television service. He shared a number of actions the cooperative has taken to bring advanced communications services to the region, including fiber.

Marketing Director Aaryn Slafky recognized this year's scholarship recipients. RTMC awarded 9 scholarships worth $6,000 in its General and Art Scholarship Programs. She also talked about community spirit and the important role the telephone cooperative plays in the community.

Current board members Janice Scott and Kent Ridge were selected for another term.

Members took advantage of several valuable discounts on RTMC's computer services, high-speed DSL Internet, bundles, Randolph Wireless, camera surveillance, and its new MyTV all-digital television offering.

Prizes were awarded for the youngest and oldest members in attendance. Attendees were also treated to a customer appreciation hot dog lunch, including homemade ice cream made by a 1937 "hit and miss" tractor engine. Special gifts for each attending member were given out and children enjoyed play time in KidzBounce inflatables. More than 100 door prizes were awarded, including the grand prize 46-inch RCA LCD TV.
